

150

wire speculum

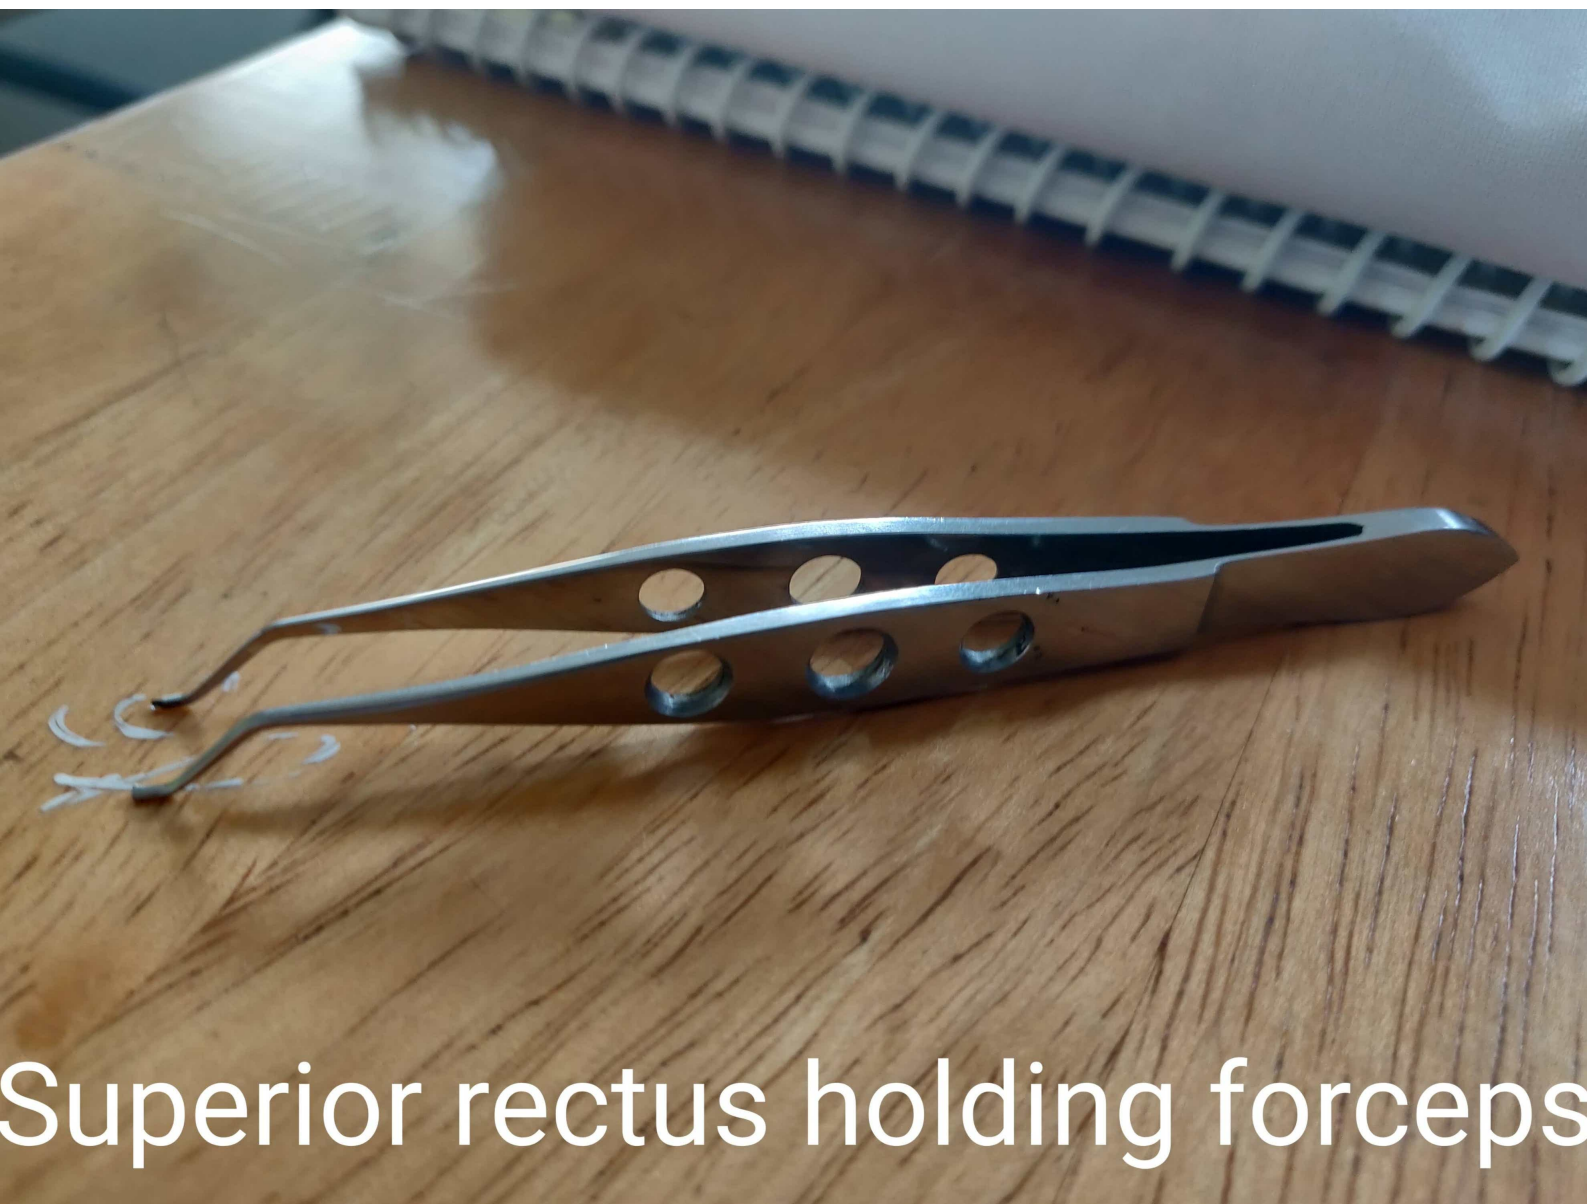

Universal metallic eye speculum

Muller's retractor

Globe fixation forceps

Superior rectus holding forceps

Suture holding and tying forceps

Corneoscleral forceps

Spring action needle holder

Conjunctival scissors

Corneal scissors

Handwritten markings on a piece of wood, including a circular diagram with internal lines and the letters "CIT" next to it.

IO L holding forceps

Keratome

Side pot entry blade

Crescent knife

Curved scissors

Straight scissors

2 way irrigation canula

Hydro dissection cannula

Castroviejo calliper

IO L dialer

Wire vectis

Punctum dilator

Desmarre's retractor

Strabismus hook

A long, thin, metallic surgical instrument with a serrated edge, lying vertically on a wooden surface. The instrument has a long, slender handle with a series of small, sharp teeth along one edge. The handle is polished and reflects light. The teeth are evenly spaced and run the length of the handle. The instrument is positioned vertically, with the handle pointing upwards and the teeth pointing downwards.

Freer's periosteum elevator

Iris retractor

Lacrimal probe

Schirmer strip

Fluorescence strip

